

SVP Investors and Partners:

Earlier this year, we requested feedback through an investor and partner survey -- thanks to everyone who participated. Your responses confirmed our direction and are helping to define our topics of focus for the remainder of this fiscal year and beyond. The majority of those who responded attend up to 4 SVP events each year and find the networking opportunities to be both valuable and relevant to your business. Based on your feedback, the top programming areas you want to hear more about include economic trends and updates, workforce resources and development, emerging industries in the Shenandoah Valley and sites & infrastructure. Most of you prefer receiving communication through this email newsletter and other digital communication and feel the amount you receive is a good amount. We are always open to your feedback and communication and appreciate those who offered additional suggestions and topic recommendations.

Outreach and Engagement

In February, Jay attended RILA LINK 2025, the Retail Supply Chain Conference with Eric Jehu, the VP of Logistics at Virginia Economic Development Partnership (VEDP). This conference is attended by chief logistics executives of many major retail chains and shippers.

VEDP co-hosted a booth with the Virginia Port Authority for the trade show portion of the conference. Working with Eric, SVP had approximately 10 one-on-one meetings with logistics companies, distribution developers and logistics software providers.
